Pomp and circumstance: NFA '89

Graduation notes

While Dawn Pierce watched her sister graduate last night, she was thinking about her graduation just one year ago. "I was thinking about the changes in my life. I was going to become a mother and I knew I had to start planning my little boy's future," Pierce said.

This year, Dawn and her six-month-old son, Kevin Pierce, watched Dawn's sister, Michelle Rouelle, graduate.

Dawn works part-time at Norwich Discount Liquor in Norwichtown although she spends most of her time taking care of Kevin.

Her sister plans to attend Mohagen Community College this fall.

"I came to see Beka Fox. She got two awards today, she's going to NYU in the fall and she is a lovely girl. A beautiful girl," Zaida Fox said.

Principal Morton Sherman

required every member of the

NFA faculty to be on hand last night for the ceremony.

All of the teachers had assignments, including 20 who were stationed along the parade

A young man, who appeared to be about 19 years old, tried to bring his box constrictor to the graduation ceremony. A police officer who spotted the man told him that snakes weren't allowed.

The man apologized, saying the snake just wanted to see a graduation ceremony.

It didn't get a chance, though. The man put the snake in a bag inside his car.

Zaida Fox came to NFA last night from Waterford to watch her granddaughter, Beka Fox, graduate. Beka is her only grandchild and Zaida is very proud of her.

Fletcher has seen four of her own children graduate from NFA.

Now that she has graduated,

Tina will work for Easter Seal

Rehabilitation Center, delivering food.

Tina won't waste any time; she starts work on Monday.

The teachers were mostly worried about fireworks and water balloons. There weren't any water balloons thrown during the ceremony but fire crackers went off several times during the presentation of the diplomas.

Jane Holloway and her sister

Katherine Fletcher were at the ceremony last night to watch

Jojo's daughter Tina graduate.
